

What the Critics Say ...

“ETHEL is increasingly finding common ground between noisy, complex experimentalism and folk-influenced brand of American populism, thus breaking down once-rigid walls that separated the two.” ~ STRAD Magazine

“...ETHEL attacked its phrases with dexterous exactitude. It was like watching four prima ballerinas dance a tightrope.” ~ Seattle Post-Globe

“It prizes grittiness and punch as absolute values, but these expert players can produce a conventionally warm, unified tone when the music demands it.”
~ The New York Times

“ETHEL....created a world in which classical music had never grown distant, a world in which it was fresh and direct as crowds dancing in the street.”
~ The Wall Street Journal

“They own their music, and when they want it to roar, they roar.”
~ The Los Angeles Times

“ The potency of an amplified edgy rock band....crank up the intensity, and throw in some improvisation and you’ll get New York’s most daring string quartet sensation, ETHEL.” ~ Strings Magazine

“ETHEL....plays their repertoire vigorously and cultivates a persona closer to (that) of a rock band than of a conventional string quartet.” ~ The New York Times

“Vital and brilliant” ~ The New Yorker

“A high-octane chamber group” ~ The New York Times

“Ultra-innovative” ~ New York Magazine

“This relentlessly inventive string quartet is setting the standard for new music engagement.” ~ San Diego Union-Tribune

“Energetic performances – rhythmically sharp, brave and altogether involving.”

~ Stereophile

“Extraordinarily skilled, passionate musicians.” ~ The New York Times
